Overview - Robin Shaw, Manager SISA

The Return to Work Act 2014 is the single largest reform of workers compensation legislation in this or any other State in decades.

The Act that requires a change of thinking about what is primary in our scheme – away from the determination of access to compensation and towards a presumption of recovery and return to work, with financial benefits as an interim support for that process.

SISA recognises the importance of the preparedness of its members to implement the new Act. We have again joined forces with ASC T&D to present SISA members with a cost-effective and comprehensive package of training modules designed to give members a sound grounding in the terms of the Act, and their interpretation where possible.

The modules will be delivered by experienced practitioners. We believe that this will be the first and the most sophisticated training of its kind available in South Australia.

In addition to the face to face sessions at ASC T&D, we will be offering webinars for those for whom access is difficult. These will be compacted discussions of each of the face-face modules.

I commend the training to you and urge you to register without delay.

Format

- 7 x face to face workshops of ½ and full day duration
- Webinars will be offered as an alternative for those for whom access is difficult
- Guest speakers will be engaged throughout the sessions to provide specific content expertise
